Foreword

Dear reader,

You are very important to us. People with disabilities should be able to take part in all areas of life in our society. Disabled people very often come across barriers and problems. This information sheet will help by giving you advice. People with disabilities will get the support they need. There is an advice centre for this. It's called: "Ergänzende Unabhängige Teilhabe-Beratungs-Stelle" in Hessen. This means "supplementary independent participation advice centre". It is also called the EUTB and is free of charge. The EUTB can answer many questions you and your family have. We want you to get personal advice and a solution.

Advice in various areas of life

We are only showing you some of the government offices and contacts that work with the EUTB here. People with disabilities often have many questions about these matters. There are many other questions too.

Disability and IDs

You will get information about disabled ID, forms, renewal decisions and much more.

Education

You will get advice about early learning, kindergarten, school, vocational training, higher education and much more.

Work and Employment

You will get answers about training, equipping workplaces, budgets for work, protection against dismissal, workshops, inclusion businesses and much more.

Care and Health

You will get answers about home care, full and partial in-patients care, aids, benefits for rehabilitation, pensions and much more.

Housing

You will get advice about looking for housing, disabled- and age-accessible conversions or new builds, aids, assisted housing and much more.

Cooperation and networking

The EUTB works together with many organisations and can help you make contact with them.

EUTB Advice Centres

The EUTB supports and advises people with disabilities and people at risk of disability. Families also get advice on rehabilitation and participation in everyday life in the whole of Germany free of charge.

How we advise you

- Supplementing advice from other centres
- Independent of government offices
- Giving advice and information
- Before you submit applications
- Together with you
- Available in German sign language

However, we do not offer any legal advice or support for appeals or legal actions.
